The St. Louis Millionaire and His Black-Listed Players-The National Agreement in Great Danger-Umpires Appointed,

There is considerable talk in certain quarters over a conference in New York between the Presidents of the National League Clubs, baying for its purpose the reinstatement of Dunlap, Shaffer, Rowe, Sweeny and other black-listed players who are wanted by the "only" Lucas. It is learned that President Reach, of the Philadelphia Club, has written Mr. Lucas that the Philadelphia Club is not | packed. in favor of a reconsideration of the action taken at a meeting held some time ago. In the language of one of the other candidates, if this argument is to be regarded as worth anything and Mr. Cleveland's administration follows in the wake of its Republican predecessors, there will be a great many in the condition of General As a matter of fact, the General is only on the outskirts of the race, and is likely to be nominated only in the event of a dead look in the convention. There are some who think that the herculean labors of N. S. Byram as a member of the commission appointed to recount the ballots in the late with the Mayorslty, but others again think the fees which were allowed on that occasion were fully commensurate with the labor of that individual has so far prevented any avowal of his candidacy. A large number of the so-called Independent Republicans, prominently in the race before the issues are fully made. Postmaster Wildman, who is soon to join the ex's, declares that he has no for the office, and in fact no thought of such a thing ever entered his mind. A postal clerk who was decidedly anti-French in the alleged investigation in which Postmaster Wildman acted as a Commissioner, remarked to a Sentinel reporter some time ago that he would be very glad for Mr. Wildman to be a candidate. He had assisted in putting a quietus on Mr. Peelle, and he was ambitions to show his regard also for Mr. Wildman. Thinking to be the bearer of glad tidings, but he replied that nothing could induce him to undertake the race, though he regretted the necessity of disappointing any of his friends.
